Over 500 Job Seekers Attend Successful Carson Job Fair Hosted by Mayor Lula Davis-Holmes in Partnership with South Bay Workforce Investment Board

HAWTHORNE, CA – The Carson Job Fair, held on August 30th at the Carson Event Center, attracted more than 500 job seekers. The event was organized by Carson Mayor Lula Davis-Holmes in collaboration with the Carson One-Stop Business and Career Center of the South Bay Workforce Investment Board (SBWIB) and the Carson Citizens Cultural Arts Foundation.

Mayor Lula Davis-Holmes expressed her pride in the efforts of the SBWIB and its commitment to supporting the community by connecting residents with job opportunities and helping local businesses find the talent needed to grow and thrive. She also offered words of encouragement to the attendees and thanked the employers for their participation.

“We are always inspired at these job fairs to see such a diverse mix of job seekers, from young adults seeking their first jobs to experienced professionals exploring career advancement or new opportunities,” said Jan Vogel, Executive Director of SBWIB.

The job fair featured 72 employers from various sectors, including retail, government, education, law enforcement, private security, construction, military, and more. Many attendees received conditional job offers on the spot, marking a significant step forward in their employment journey.

For over 41 years, the SBWIB has provided free services to residents and businesses across the South Bay region through its four One-Stop Business and Career Centers located in Inglewood, Carson, Torrance, and Gardena.
